Two more law firms have signed on in support of the Massachusetts Bar Association's Lawyers Eco-Challenge, a program developed in collaboration with the Conservation Law Foundation to help make law firms more environmentally friendly, the organization said on Tuesday.

Brown, Rudnick, Berlack, Israels LLP and Greenberg Traurig LLP, both in Boston, are the newest firms to join the Eco-Challenge.

More than 50 law firms and organizations have already joined the effort, which asks attorneys to implement the MBA Green Guidelines. Other firm members include Burns & Levinson, Holland Knight, Seyfarth Shaw and WilmerHale.

"It's gratifying to have so many large Boston law firms accepting our challenge to make the practice of law more environmentally friendly," said MBA president David White, in a statement.

SLIDE SHOW World's Most Worthless Money

As Americans worry about inflation exceeding 4%, we should consider Zimbabwe, where the inflation rate broke the shocking 100,000% mark and the country released a 10 million-dollar note (now valued below $4).
